Security Screening & Traveling with Medications

Advance planning now can make your travel much more pleasant. One of the many things to plan is traveling with liquids and medications. All passenger items must undergo security screening and these tips will help you make the screening process go more smoothly.

TSA Travel Checklist

TSA has prepared a checklist with information about what to pack and how to pack it to facilitate the airport screening process. View the checklist.

Traveling with Liquids

You are allowed to bring a quart-sized bag of liquids, aerosols, gels, creams and pastes in your carry-on bag and through the checkpoint. These are limited to travel-sized containers that are 3.4 ounces (100 milliliters) or less per item. Placing these items in the small bag and separating from your carry-on baggage facilitates the screening process. Pack items that are in containers larger than 3.4 ounces or 100 milliliters in checked baggage.

Any liquid, aerosol, gel, cream or paste that alarms during screening will require additional screening.

Traveling with Medications

TSA does not require passengers to have medications in original prescription bottles, but states have individual laws that may require that your medications be in their original containers when transporting them within your state (to/from the airport). If you do not bring your medications in their original containers, it is recommended that you travel with a list of medications you take.

Vaccinations

There are no vaccinations required for travel to Alaska; however, check with your healthcare provider to be sure you are up-to-date on routine vaccines.

Tips on What to Pack

- We have traditional dining at 7:15 PM. The dining time changed from an previous email as Princess could not accommodate us all at 6:00 PM. We will be seated together at 7:15 PM each day, unless you have opted to stay onshore for dinner.
- Transportation from the Seattle Airport to the port on June 15 is included in your tour price and from the port to our Seattle hotel on June 22. More information about when and where to meet at the airport on June 15 will be available later this spring.
